BURY PRISON FIRE VICTIMS

MOURNERS CHECKED TO IDENTIFY THOSE WHO ESCAPED BLAZE

Believe Response To Telegram Clew To Missing Men.

NEW LEXINGTON, O., Oct. 11.—With their heads bowed and tears streaming down their faces, relatives and friends of the fifteen victims of the state prison brick plant fire here Monday, paid final tribute today to those whom they had loved.

Mothers and fathers, brothers and sisters—and sweethearts—came to New Lexington this morning as Catholics and Protestants joined in memorial services for the prisoners, most of whom were burned beyond recognition.

The bodies were buried in a common grave, the remains of each in a casket intended for a baby.

Through the group of relatives and friends and curious onlookers, the institution from which the victims came. They recorded the names of those gathered about the grave—those who appeared to be mourning the men listed among the twenty missing.

The officials were attempting to identify the victims. It was true, but they also had another purpose—to learn, if possible the names of the men who escaped.

Thus did the state of Ohio set in motion its machinery to recapture the prisoners who scaled the walls during the mad rush for freedom—the first definite move to find the five men still unaccounted for.

Warden P. E. Thomas' plan was simple.

Telegrams were sent to the nearest relatives of each man listed as missing. The names of those who met here today in final tribute were recorded. Likewise were the names recorded of relatives who did not attend and the names of the latter were the ones which were taken as the first clues in the officials' attempt to determine the identity of the men who fled.

"If relatives of the missing men failed to come, it's a good indication that the relatives know the men are safe somewhere," a prison official told the United Press.

Telegrams had notified the relatives that their kin "either perished or escaped during Junction City prison fire. Impossible to identify remains. Funeral services 9 o'clock Thursday morning at New Lexington in chapel of Catholic and Protestant chaplains. Notify other relatives."

TODAY'S CHUCKLE
MARYSVILLE, Cal., Oct. 11.—When Jack Wagner, warehouseman, lost 50 cents in a poker game here, he accused the house of cheating, and told the police, whose body was found floating in the Ohio Canal Monday.

Detectives working on the case believe Paul has not left the city. The boy's mother, Mrs. Betty Davis, found a note on the top of a dresser. In a scrawling hand was written:

"Dear mother—
"I pushed a boy in the canal and he drowned. I am going away but will be back some day."
Upon a second piece of paper he wrote:

"I will come back to see you once a week."
The bottom of the note was covered with crosses which meant kisses for his mother. Both notes were written with a red pencil.

The Albright lad had been missing from his home since Sunday and early Tuesday the caretaker of the canal reported finding the body.

AKRON, O., Oct. 11.—Paul Davis, 13, today was wandering about Akron, believing he has murdered eleven-year-old Harvey Albright, whose body was found floating in the Ohio Canal Monday.

HUGE ZEPPELIN FLYING TO UNITED STATES

The huge Graf Zeppelin, largest aircraft yet built, hopes to establish a new speed record in its present flight from Germany to the United States. The dirigible left Germany Thursday morning in charge of Dr. Eckener, (inset), its designer. Left, one of the five powerful Maybach engines that propel the air liner; right, radio cubicle on the ship and a portion of the control room.

CHICAGO DETECTIVES TO DEAL HAND IN LATEST BEER RACKET

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—John Stege, deputy commissioner of detectives, sent six carefully selected squads into the south side beer belt today on the strength of reports of widespread "muscling in" by rival beer runners.

"We are moving into the front line trenches," Stege said, "and we are going to stay."
"Muscling in" is gangland's term for the process by which competitive beer syndicates invade each other's territory and force sales of their product on saloon keepers.

The disappearance of Joe Salts, former dictator of beer distribution in one area on the south side and the break between Scarface Al Capone and Ralph Sheldon, Capone's former lieutenant, has resulted in a general violation of the borders which divide the territories of rival gangsters.

Salts disappeared after being sentenced to sixty days in jail for carrying a concealed weapon. Capone then ousted Sheldon and put Hugh "Stubby" McGovern in his place. Sheldon took his followers over the O'Donnell gang and together they are said to have begun a campaign of "muscling in" throughout the Salts territory.

Resentment by loyal Salts men over that invasion is believed responsible for the machine gun attack night before last on Spike O'Donnell. Spike showed up at police headquarters today and announced that he was "out to get Salts whether the police can find him or not."

When a gang sets out to "muscle in" in another gang's territory its representatives go in a three car caravan.

The first car stops in front of the saloon and two car leaders go inside while occupants of the other cars train their weapons on the front door in preparation for a fight. The men who go inside merely tell the proprietor "we are dropping two here." That means the beer truck will be along shortly and that the keeper of the speakeasy must accept and pay for two barrels of beer.

COLUMBIA MAY START TO ROME

ROOSEVELT FIELD, L. I., Oct. 11.—The Bellanca monoplane "Columbia" was taken from its hangar here this morning while mechanics went over it in preparation for the machine's proposed flight to Rome later in the day.

Charles A. Levine, owner of the plane, was at the field, but Roger O. Williams, and Pietro Bonelli, who were to pilot the big cabin monoplane on its long flight had not arrived.

The plane had been partly fueled and an instrument man was "swinging" its compass.

Williams and Bonelli reached the field about 8:30, and Williams said he believed the plane would be ready to takeoff about 11 a. m. Neither the owner, pilot nor navigator would admit directly that the destination of the flight was Rome, but Bonelli said the Columbia would follow the same course as which was to have flown to the Italian capital.

CONFESSES MURDER OF SERPENT MOUND GAS STATION OWNER

Suspect Who Denied
- Guilt Finally Admits
Crime

WEST UNION, O., Oct. 11.—Otis Maddy, 29, of near Rarden, Scioto County, held in the county jail here on a murder charge, has confessed slaying Isaac Wallace, 35, filling station proprietor near Serpent Mound Park, on Sept. 30, according to Sheriff Walter White.

Wallace died without regaining consciousness, and Maddy was arrested the next day after being traced by his auto which was seen near the station before the slaying. Maddy claimed he rented his car to two strangers.

Wallace's watch and $400 were missing. Maddy had the victim's leather coat and $84. He claimed he purchased the coat from the two men and found the money in the coat.

Maddy says he visited Wallace Sept. 29, that they drank together and then argued over his trying to help Wallace make change.

Maddy claims Wallace grabbed a hammer and that he picked up a hatchet in self defense.

Both weapons were found in the room but were not bloody and officials were in doubt which weapon was used. Maddy says the victim's money and watch fell out on the floor.

Sheriff White found the watch and more than $300 in the field when Maddy directed him to search.

CHILD IS KILLED

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 11.—A five-year-old girl was killed and her younger brother narrowly escaped serious injury when they ran into the path of a southbound street car here late yesterday.

The girl was Kathleen Reames, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reames. Her brother, aged 3, was cut and bruised.

A week ago the oldest girl began to doubt that her mother was dead, and in a letter to Canadian authorities asked that Mrs. Mackie be located. A radio appeal was made, and through it the mother learned where her daughters were. A third daughter was located in a nearby city, but no trace of a son can be found.

FAMILY UNITED AFTER LONG SEARCH

CLEVELAND, Oct. 11.—A small Ontario village.

Their separation began in 1920 when Mrs. Mackie and her husband parted. While the mother lay ill in a hospital, four children of the couple were scattered, and adopted by widely separated families.

Helen and Patricia were accepted as daughters by George Lindsay, and lived in Cleveland.

WINDS FORCED LINER TO CHANGE COURSE; SHIP CARRIES SIXTY

Three Americans Are Passengers When Giant Dirigible Inaugurates Trans-Atlantic Service; May Arrive Saturday.

PARIS, Oct. 11.—The Graf Zeppelin passed over Montelimar, in the Rhone Valley eighty-three miles south of Lyons, at 2 p. m. today.

After heading west from Lyons towards the Bay of Biscay, the dirigible changed her course to due south to avoid head winds in her path and headed towards the Mediterranean.

The Graf Zeppelin, after making good progress on the early part of the flight from Friedrichshafen to Lyons, on a southwesterly course toward the Bay of Biscay, encountered adverse weather conditions and lost much time.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the dirigible, was advised by wireless that the winds were more favorable south of the Pyrenees Mountains, which divide France and Spain.

Eckener therefore turned the ship to the south. It appeared likely he would continue down the Rhone towards the Mediterranean, probably by way of Montpellier and Perignan, where he would round the corner of the Pyrenees.

After that the route was uncertain of regular dirigible travel between Europe and the United States.

The crew and passengers, three of whom are Americans, number sixty.

The passenger list for this flight includes these Americans:

Lieut. Commander Charles E. Rosendahl of the United States navy; Robert Reiner, a textile manufacturer of Weehawken, N. J.; Frederick Giffillan, American resident of Lucerne, Switzerland and among others were: Count Brandenstein-Zepplin, son-in-law of Count Zeppelin after whom the dirigible is named; Karl von Weigand and Lady Drummond Hay, respectively.

LUXURY FEATURE OF NEW GRAF ZEPPELIN

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Oct. 11.—The Graf Zeppelin is the most luxurious air liner ever to put out. She is equipped to carry twenty passengers on the long flight and forty on a shorter flight. Their accommodations are with the same luxury that the best transatlantic steamships have.

There are ten state rooms aboard and these are greatly similar to the staterooms of the big ocean liners.

Facts about Graf Zeppelin:
Length: 770.5 feet.
Height: 100 feet.
Capacity: 3,707,970 cubic feet.

Motors: five 12-cylinder, 550-horsepower Maybach-Zepplin motors, weighing 2450 pounds each. Separate gondola houses each motor, distributed along bottom of bag to avoid interference from one another's backwash.

Fuel: Blau gas, commonly known as "blue gas," a highly compressed gaseous fuel derived from oil. Its specific gravity is almost the same as air, so that fuel consumption during the voyage does not disturb the weight balance of the ship and makes it unnecessary to let off buoyant gas to counterbalance the loss of weight from consumed gas line or other liquid fuel.

Speed: maximum 80.7 miles an hour; traveling speed, 68.3 miles an hour. At traveling speed and with a load of about 33,000 pounds, the dirigible is estimated to have a traveling range of more than 6000 miles.

Cost: about $1,000,000.

Owners: The German people. Built by Zeppelin. Co. on funds raised partly by popular subscription and partly by government subsidy.

TWO GYPSY GIRLS ROB GAS STATION

WARREN, O., Oct. 11.—Two girls about 20 and believed to be of a gypsy party, held up a gasoline station here last night and rifled the cash register of $30.

An older woman supervised the job according to Andy Barna, the owner of the station.

When the two girls entered the station one of them drew a revolver and backed Barna against the wall. The other rifled the cash register.

The girls and the woman then raced to a car, leaped in it and fled.

Both threats were in the form of notes, which officials attributed to a crank.

Eckener therefore turned the ship to the south. It appeared likely he would continue down the Rhone towards the Mediterranean, probably by way of Montpellier and Perignan, where he would round the corner of the Pyrenees.

After that the route was uncertain, although it seemed likely the zeppelin would continue along the Mediterranean and thence out to sea south of the Azores.

The Graf Zeppelin was about 1,900 feet up when she passed Montelimar.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Oct. 11.—Through a misty dawn, and with variable tail winds aiding her, the dirigible Graf Zeppelin started today on the long flight to the United States.

A band played "Deutschland Uber Alles" and thousands of spectators—many of which had gathered as early as midnight—cheered as the silver-colored craft rose slowly at 7:51 a. m. and finally got underway one minute later.

The five twelve-cylinder motors pulled this new sky monster, the most luxurious air liner thus far constructed, at a speed of eighty kilometers an hour. It swung southward, gaining altitude nicely.

The course she took at the start indicated the route would be the same as that used by the Los Angeles when she was flown to the United States in 1924.

The route leads across southern France, the Bay of Biscay, Coruna, Spain, and thence out to the Azores. It is 4,776 miles and is considerably longer than the route she had been expected to take—across Belgium, the English channel, and thence along the north Atlantic ship lane to reach the United States within sixty or seventy hours. This would place the craft over New York late Saturday afternoon or early Saturday night.

Dr. Eckener was commanding the first trans-Atlantic air passenger service, probably a fore-runner of regular dirigible travel between Europe and the United States.

The crew and passengers, three of whom are Americans, number sixty.

The passenger list for this flight includes these Americans: Lieut. Commander Charles E. Rosendahl of the United States navy; Robert Reimer, a textile manufacturer of Weehawken, N. J.; Frederick Giffilan, American resident of Lucerne, Switzerland and among others were: Count Brandenstein-Zeppelin, son-in-law of Count Zeppelin after whom the dirigible is named; Karl Von Wels and Lady Drummond Hay, respectively.

LUXURY FEATURE OF NEW GRAF ZEPPELIN

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany Oct. 11.—The Graf Zeppelin is the most luxurious air liner ever to put out. She is equipped to carry twenty passengers on the long flight and forty on a shorter flight. Their accommodations are with the same luxury that the best transatlantic steamships have.

There are ten state rooms aboard and these are greatly similar to the staterooms of the big ocean liners.

Facts about Graf Zeppelin:

Length: 770 ft.
Height: 100 ft.
Capacity: 3,707,970 cubic feet.
Motors: five 12-cylinder, 550-horsepower Maybach-Zeppelin motors, weighing 2450 pounds each. Separate gondola houses each motor, distributed along bottom of bag to avoid interference from one another's backwash.

Fuel: Blau gas, commonly known as "blue gas," a highly compressed gaseous fuel derived from oil. Its specific gravity is almost the same as air, so that fuel consumption during the voyage does not disturb the weight balance of the ship and makes it unnecessary to let out buoyant gas to counterbalance the loss of weight from consumed gasoline or other liquid fuel.

Speed: maximum 80.7 miles an hour; traveling speed, 68.3 miles an hour. At traveling speed and with a load of about 33,000 pounds, the dirigible is estimated to have a traveling range of more than 6000 miles.

Cost: about $1,000,000.
Owners: The German people. Built by Zeppelin Co. on funds raised partly by popular subscription and partly by government subsidy.

TWO GYPSY GIRLS ROB GAS STATION

WARREN, O., Oct. 11.—Two girls aged about 20 and believed to be of a gypsy party, held up a gas station here last night and rifled the cash register of $30.

An older woman supervised the job according to Andy Barna, the owner of the station.
When the two girls entered the station one of them drew a revolver and backed Barna against the wall. The other rifled the cash register.
The girls and the woman then raced to a car, leaped in it and fled.

Both threats were in the form of a note, which officials attributed to a crank.

THUGS ATTACK MAN

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Oct. 11.—His pockets rifled and a deep wound in his head, Jacob Seyler, 63, was left to die in a vacant lot here last night by holdup men. Officers discovered him shortly before midnight.

MAYOR'S COURT

OUT AGAIN, IN AGAIN

Only recently released from the Cincinnati Workhouse, Frank Ford, 50, will be given a hearing for possessing liquor before Mayor John W. Prugh Thursday afternoon.

Arrested with Frank Galvon, 58, and Elva Shingledecker, 48, by Patrolmen Charles Thompson and J. E. Craig Wednesday night, Ford pleaded not guilty Thursday morning.

Galvon and Shingledecker were each fined $10 and costs for intoxication by Mayor Prugh.

In a search of the automobile in which they were sitting, the officers discovered two half-pints of corn whiskey, and two empty bottles, they reported.

RESISTED ARREST, ALLEGED Robert Nooks, 19, colored, will be arraigned before Mayor Prugh Thursday afternoon on a charge of resisting an officer following his arrest Wednesday night by Patrolmen George Robinson and J. E. Craig.

The officers visited his home hunting for a brother, who is said to owe the city for the balance of an old fine. They asked Nooks his name and he refused to tell them. When they threatened to take him to Police Headquarters he showed fight, they said.

OLD FINE BASIS OF ARREST

Charged with failure to pay a balance of $19.50 due on an old fine, Fred Moore, 38, colored, was re-arrested Wednesday by Patrolman George Robinson and locked up at Police Headquarters.

CHARGES DISMISSED

Charges of disorderly conduct against Raymond Howard, 25, and his brother, James, 18, were dismissed by Mayor Prugh Thursday. Neighbors complained to police the brothers were fighting at their home on Cottage Grove Ave. Patrolman J. E. Craig, who lives nearby, was notified and he brought them to Police Headquarters.

KONJOLA BRINGS NEW FEELINGS OF GLORIOUS HEALTH

Wonderful Relief from Stomach Trouble Given Local Man; Gladly Indorses New Medicine

Konjola is helping thousands of people who were never benefited by any medicine or treatment before. The new compound acts up on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, cleansing the whole inner system and thus bringing relief to people who suffer from disorders of these organs. At the same time Konjola brings new feelings of health over the whole system in general. This remarkable remedy has been indorsed by hundreds of Xenia people in all walks of life. One of the latest amazing statements came from Mr. W. B. Masters, Alpha, O., (near Xenia) who made the following statement to the Konjola Man at the Gallaher Drug Store, Xenia, Ohio.

"Konjola has given me new health in every way," said Mr. Masters, "and I am glad to tell others so that they may benefit in the same way."

"For several years I have been bothered with stomach trouble. Immediately after I would get through eating, gas would begin to form in the pit of my stomach. Everything I ate would sour on my stomach and I would belch up a hot, sour, burning liquid. This taste would stay in my mouth for several hours afterward and my throat would feel as though it was on fire. The pressure of the gas upon my heart would be so great that I thought it was going to stop beating. At night I could not sleep well but would be forced to walk the floor because the pains from my stomach were so great. I would become very short of breath at the least bit of exercise and the pains and misery in my stomach went clear through to my back. I was told by many people that my stomach was in an acid condition. I tried every medicine I had ever heard of for relief, but the trouble still remained with me. A friend of mine, who came to visit me, told about this new medicine and advised me to give it a trial. So I got some and began taking it. It is a blessing that I did because I had only been taking it a week when I noticed a wonderful change over my whole system. It seemed to me that new life energy was flowing through my body. I kept on taking this medicine and soon completed a full treatment of it. Now, my stomach never bothers me and I can sit down and eat whatever is placed before me without a thought of after effects. The gas never comes any more and those awful belching spells that I formerly had, are gone. When I go to bed I sleep right on through until morning and when I get up I feel full of pep and vigor. There is not a pain anywhere in my body and I know it is all due to my taking Konjola. I want to indorse and recommend this medicine to other people suffering as I have."

The Konjola Man is at the Gallaher Drug Store, Xenia, where he is daily meeting the public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy. Free samples given.

OUTLINE YEAR'S WORK AT W. C. T. U. MEETING

Outing work and making recommendations for the various unions in the county were the items accomplished at the county executive meeting of the W. C. T. U., held at the home of Mrs. W. O. Custis, S. Detroit St., Wednesday afternoon.

In order to carry out the work of the organization, five of the general officers will be given "The Union Signal" national paper of the W. C. T. U., to guide them in their work. It was planned that the future county meetings would be handled by relays of three county directors.

Arrangements were made to replace the Ten Commandments in the schools where the former copies have become old. The first Sunday in November was announced as "Anti-Cigarette Day" and will be set aside for a day of prayer for the outcome of the ensuing election.

A report was made of the reception of the "Friendship Bags" by the children of Mexico from the children of this country, one hundred of which were sent from Greene County.

Departments in which work will be specialized the coming year will be: health, peace, anti-narcotics, child welfare and Christian citizenship. It was announced a court committee was appointed to attend all trials of this county in which women and children were involved.

A "chain" system has been organized, by which all members in the county can be notified of events within a short period. The Greene County organization has recommended to the state, for a recommendation in turn to the nation, that a memorial tablet be erected on the Peace Bridge joining United States and Canada, dedicated to the men responsible for the structure.

The state W. C. T. U. convention will be held at the Neil House, Columbus, October 22-23.

A large delegation from the newly-organized union in Bath Twp., attended the executive meeting.

Mrs. Everett Dabe (Mary Hurley) was feted when members of the Young Woman's Missionary Society First U. P. Church, were entertained at the home of Miss Lillian Dixon, S. Detroit St., Monday evening.

The class members surprised Mrs. Dabe with a "shower" of miscellaneous gifts and she received many lovely things. The meeting was in charge of Miss Helen Reed. Refreshments were served after the meeting and a social time spent.

Mrs. Mary Seldomrich is seriously ill with heart trouble at her home on W. Main St.

Miss Zella Soward has been confined to her home on Hivling St., several days, with a severe cold.

OFFICERS OF LEGION AUXILIARY ELECTED.

Mrs. Fred Baldwin was re-elected president of the American Legion Auxiliary, at the monthly meeting in Post Hall, Monday evening.

KONJOLA BRINGS NEW FEELINGS OF GLORIOUS HEALTH

people who suffer from disorders of these organs. At the same time Konjola brings new feelings of health over the whole system in general. This remarkable remedy has been indorsed by hundreds of Xenia people in all walks of life. One of the latest amazing statements came from Mr. W. B. Masters, Alpha, O. (near Xenia) who made the following statement to the Konjola Man at the Galaher Drug Store, Xenia, Ohio.

"Konjola has given me new health in every way," said Mr. Masters, "and I am glad to tell others so that they may benefit in the same way."

"For several years I have been bothered with stomach trouble. Immediately after I would get through eating, gas would begin to form in the pit of my stomach. Everything I ate would sour on my stomach and I would belch up a hot, sour, burning liquid. This gas would stay in my mouth for several hours afterward and my throat would feel as though it was on fire. The pressure of the gas upon my heart would be so great that I thought it was going to stop beating. At night I could not sleep well but would be forced to walk the floor because the pains from my stomach were so great. I would become very short of breath at the least bit of exercise and the pains and misery in my stomach went clear through to my back. I was told by many people that my stomach was in an acid condition. I tried every medicine I had ever heard of for relief, but the trouble still remained with me."

"A friend of mine, who came to visit me, told about this new medicine and advised me to give it a trial. So I got some and began taking it. It is a blessing that I did because I had only been taking it a week when I noticed a wonderful change over my whole system. It seemed to me that new life energy was flowing through my body. I kept on taking this medicine and soon completed a full treatment of it. Now, my stomach never bothers me and I can sit down and eat whatever is placed before me without a thought of after effects. The gas never comes any more and those awful belching spells that I formerly had, are gone. When I go to bed I sleep right on through until morning and when I get up I feel full of pep and vigor. There is not a pain anywhere in my body and I know it is all due to my taking Konjola. I want to indorse and recommend this medicine to other people suffering as I have."

The Konjola Man is at the Galaher Drug Store, Xenia, where he is daily meeting the public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy. Free samples given.

OUTLINE YEAR'S WORK AT W. C. T. U. MEETING

Outlining work and making recommendations for the various unions in the county were the items accomplished at the county executive meeting of the W. C. T. U., held at the home of Mrs. W. O. Custis, S. Detroit St., Wednesday afternoon.

Departments in which work will be specialized the coming year will be: health, peace, anti-narcotics, child welfare and christian citizenship. It was announced a court committee was appointed to attend all trials of this county in which women and children were involved.

A "chain" system has been organized, by which all members in the county can be notified of events within a short period. The Greene County organization has recommended to the state, for a recommendation in turn to the nation, that a memorial tablet be erected on the Peace Bridge joining United States and Canada, dedicated to the men responsible for the structure.

Three Triumphant Yankees conduct the Blindfold test . . . and MILLER HUGGINS picks OLD GOLD

The Babe and Lou here will tell you that there is only one way to choose a pitcher . . . and that's to send him into the box and let him twirl a few innings.

So the best way to choose a cigarette is to put them all through their paces in the blindfold test.

In the test I have just made, Old Gold played right into my mitt. Its zippy flavor and mellow smoothness couldn't be touched by the other three brands.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

SHOUT FOR JOY—Cry out and shout, thou inhabitant of Zion: for great is the Holy One of Israel in the midst of thee.—Isa 12:6.

THE RISING CASUALTY ROLL

It may be true that in proportion to the increase of motor vehicles on the highways of the United States motor fatalities are on the decrease, but the larger cities can make no such showing. The record of four weeks ending September 8, compared with four weeks ending September 10, 1927, shows that in the 77 larger cities of the country there were 620 deaths this year as compared with 525 for the four weeks a year ago.

This cannot be due to bad driving. On the contrary, admitting the appealing carelessness and drunkenness that figure in accidents, the general average of driving improves year by year. Experience is a persuasive teacher to all except those who lack capacity to profit by it. The plain truth is that growing street congestion, and failure to relieve dangerous parking conditions, are largely to blame.

This is not something time will aid, either. It is vain to hope that any saturation point in motorization will halt the rise in the casualty record. It is doubtful whether the time will ever come when motor registration actually begins a permanent decline. Next to water supply, and sewers, there is no problem of metropolitan regions more urgent than traffic regulation, and the provision of suburban bypasses, and cross-town routes, to facilitate movements, and mitigate the risk of life and limb.

AMERICA'S FIRST MEN

The first inhabitants of America came from Asia, across the ice of the Behring straits. This conclusion was announced by Dr. Hrdlicka of the Smithsonian institution, at the congress of Americanists at New York. He thinks these very early settlers came about 5,000 years ago.

It is a significant development in human history according to this authority, that these first migrants were not crude barbarians, but brought a highly developed culture. Apparently their descendants have deteriorated in all these years. Which suggests that human progress is not a thing that is inevitable and necessary. Races are much like people and communities. Either they have to be adding to their capacities, or the powers they have slip away from them.

THE WOMEN DRIVERS

Much discussion is heard about the merits of women as drivers of automobiles. On the face of it they are better drivers than men. The Travelers Insurance company has been looking into the subject, basing its study on several hundred thousand claims coming from 30 states. It appears that women were driving the cars in only five per cent of the cases where accidents occurred.

No large ratio of accidents to women drivers could be expected, as there are not nearly so many of them, they do not drive so many miles in a year and do not drive so much in congested traffic. It is hard to say which sex does the better driving. Women have more innate sense of courtesy which promotes safety but they may get more easily flustered.

A sound argument does not require as much sound as a weak one.

Too often people, who have sense enough to interest you, have too much to be interested in you.

A man long used to directing men said to the writer that he can always tell a real worker by the way he acts on a new job. If he's a strong man, the kind you are going to keep a long time, he starts right in to work as soon as he hangs up his hat. The man who is naturally a loafer and never will be a world-beater will take a lot of time to get settled. He will want supplies of all sorts. He will want just exactly the right kind of a typewriter and desk or whatever it is he works with. The fellow who turns in results is the fellow who starts to produce with whatever is convenient to his hand. He doesn't want much except a chance to work.

NEW YORK.—Frances Goodrich, actress, third wife of Hendrick Van Loon, historian, is very much in the public eye. Not only because her husband, who has pronounced modern views on marriage, is reported back with the second wife in Holland and, therefore, Miss Goodrich is in the divorce news, but because she's the co-author of two plays to be produced. Furthermore, she's acting in a Broadway play. Which gives editors three reasons for using a good looking woman's picture.

Did you ever go to a de luxe movie in New York? The picture is the least important thing (and is, unfortunately). First, one stares at the theater, with its $9,000,000 of decorations and real paintings. Then, one tries to pierce the dull glow to see where the ceiling is. It's ten stories up.

About that time the organ with one of the three regular organists at it rises from the basement, and the lights glow into different colors.

As if to correct such an impression, the orchestra sinks into a pit, plays a snatch of jazz, and then—lo—the golden stairways, nine stories up, are alive with nuns, etc., who march down in gloomier gloom, with lighted candles and finally standing draped over stairways and balconies, high up, singing a quasi-operatic selection, a passionate Hebrew melody, decidedly oriental.

This fades away and a movie comes on. As a last one knows he's in a movie theater. Then comes an exquisite dancing ensemble in the Souve Souris' Russian number, "The Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," which ensemble is of large proportions, to fit the theater. Newsreel next.

Then, a presentation, an introduction to the picture, with huge 100 persons on the huge stage, and all sorts of trick scenery. Singing, dancing, special effects. Few musical comedies have better.

Don't give up hope. The picture follows. It's the same as everywhere else, except here 7,000 persons laugh at one time—and one thinks it is better. But, of course, it isn't.

Maybe some day there will be pictures made especially for the New York movie houses. At least the movie kings have got the architects.

Jack Dempsey, and his wife, Estelle Taylor, soon will take their play of prize fight life off Broadway and go to the road. It's said the earnings in other cities will be much more. Jack is supposed to get $5,000 a week, plus a percentage of the earnings, with Miss Taylor getting $1,500 a week or more. The critics think Dempsey the whole play.

One reason why the telephone companies are gradually installing automatic switchboards to replace girl operators is that they anticipate increasing difficulty in obtaining enough workers of the intelligence such work requires. In other words, their demand for competent operators will run ahead of the increase in population. The last few years has shown an increasing general demand for women workers, thus setting up more competition for the kind of girls capable of being good operators. Moreover, there is grave fear that of all girls obliged to enter employment, those too dull-witted to be good operators will increase more rapidly than the bright ones. The ratio of really smart folks to those not so smart is never any too high.

Crab's Emotions Shown

That crabs have some emotions and not others was demonstrated by scientists in London recently. It was shown that a crab fettered by one claw and left with food just out of reach will starve to death, but the placing of a polyp, the crab's deadly enemy, near it, will cause the prisoner to become convulsed with fear. The shock causes the tied claw to come off so that the crustacean can scuttle away to safety.

Street To Be Ball Room

Entertaining guests together and using the street as the ball room is the plan being worked out by residents of one side of North Street, London. Under the shadow of Westminster the neighbors of the small and ancient street have become well acquainted and as their homes are too small for entertaining on a large scale, they propose to cover the pavement with an awning and throw open their respective houses, which will be used as places for sitting out. Dinner will be served in each house so that guests will have the choice of at least a dozen meals.

ANOTHER CLOUD WITH A SILVER LINING

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Anthropology teaches that this presidential campaign is, not so much of a reversion to the politics of the dark ages as some people think it is.

I thought so myself until I put the proposition up to Dr. Ales Hrdlicka. He punctured the idea. Even politicians are a better breed than formerly, he assured me.

At first, indeed, the doctor was not so positive about it. However, after giving the subject a little consideration, "Progress is one of the laws of nature," he said. "It may not seem to apply to politicians, as we see them. Yet they must be improving gradually, for nature makes no exceptions. After all a few million years are not long, viewed scientifically."

The doctor grinned. Evidently it was a novelty concerning the presidential campaign of 1928.

The human race is his specialty. Not merely the human race, as we have had it here with us since history began to be written—but away 'way back as far as the very dawn of the pre-historic period.

Dr. Hrdlicka, in short, is the world's foremost anthropologist. But first let me explain how I happened to take this question up with Dr. Hrdlicka, even though it forces me to record my interview with him serially.

Because really it was a unique interview. The doctor has been written and been quoted to the extent of a good-sized library on scientific subjects, but he admitted to me frankly that this was his initial experience at discussing a presidential campaign.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

DEVELOPING BEAUTY FROM INFANCY

I think that as every mother dreams of greatness for her son, she dreams of beauty for her daughter. The strange part is that while most mothers realize that it is within their own power to make what they will of the minds and the characters of their children, they frequently forget that the development of physical loveliness lies well within their own hands. I am going to try and explain many easily forgotten methods I know of, in which a mother can develop loveliness in her child, not only so that it lasts through youth, but remains as an eternal blessing through the years.

From the earliest days of infancy, we have certain fundamentals of care which may be attended to in such a way as to provide comfort for the present, and beauty for the future. When a little baby comes into the world, it is not very beautiful. It has a skin as soft as rose petals, and endless possibilities. It is then possibilities which we must not neglect.

The first thing your doctor or nurse will tell you when your baby is placed in your arms is the proper way to hold the child. It is strange that while we realize how carefully the little head must be protected and the neck and spine supported, we forget that the baby lies absolutely flat.

If, in early days, as not infrequently happens, the baby shows a desire to sleep on its stomach, do not discourage it, but take care that there are no pillows or cushions in the mattress to throw the spine out of alignment.

As both a health and a beauty measure for your baby, be sure that there is never any constriction of the little legs or arms through tight and binding clothing. As a general rule, the less you can put on your baby the better it is. By that I do not mean that you are to select clothes in-

Household Hints

MENU HINT

Breaded Veal Steak, Cream Sauce
Mashed Potatoes Fried Eggplant
Sliced Tomatoes, French Dressing
Cornstarch Pudding Coffee
For the cream gravy proceed as follows: After meat is done remove from pan, add flour, mix well and when brown, add milk to make gravy. Cook until thick and smooth. The steak is more easily served when it is cut in pieces the size of each serving.

TODAY'S RECIPE

Cornstarch Pudding—Heat two cups of milk in a double boiler. Add one-third cup sugar or one-quarter cup strained honey, and stir in six tablespoons cornstarch. Cook until smooth. Pour into a bowl to chill, and fold in one cup whipped cream flavored with vanilla. Serve with fresh or canned fruits or berries.

SUGGESTIONS

New Way With Old Pudding.
A new way to serve the old, familiar cornstarch pudding is as follows: Scald one quart of milk and add a beaten egg and the following dry ingredients: three tablespoons sugar, pinch of salt. Cook until thick, add teaspoon vanilla and cool. Then pour into sherbet glasses lined with lady fingers and top with a spoonful of your favorite jam.

Hat Stands Amusing

The new hat stands are amusing as well as useful. One is a big, white bunny, sitting up holding a cabbage leaf in his front paws while he nibbles it, presumably, his upstanding ears making the hat rest. Then there is a big black cat with arched back and tail with a pointed witch's cap on her back, whereon a hat may well be placed. A row of such on the closet shelf makes an interesting study while selecting the hat for the outing planned.

The Way to Wash Gloves

The proper way to wash gloves is in two cool rinses, using a teaspoon of soap beads in each rinse water. Wipe dry with a Turkish towel—blow into the gloves to restore their shape and finish drying process away from the heat.

Creole Sauce

(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe)
Mix one quart sliced white onions and twelve finely-chopped green peppers. Simmer until soft, add about twice the bulk of tomatoes and cook together over a low fire until tender. Season to taste. Pack into clean, hot jars, and seal immediately.

sufficiently warm. This is a dreadful mistake, of course. However, it is not necessary to bind the child in the swaddling clothes which I truly believe are much to blame for many cases of ill health and improper development. It has been frequently advanced as a theory that the small stature and fragile bones of the Latin peoples have been developed through generations of "swaddling." In many instances, among the peasantry of Italy, babies are actually sewed into their clothes.

Quite aside from the question of sanitation, it is a harmful practice which stunts the growth of the child.
Insure your baby's health and happiness by light and loose clothing.

DIABETICS. OVERWEIGHTERS. BEST LEARN TO OMIT SWEETS

The Use of Saccharin.
I wrote sometime ago and I consider my question of sufficient interest to find an answer in the paper, but so far you have not answered. I asked if the best authorities on the treatment of diabetes approve of the use of saccharin and if they recommend it.

Since writing you last, my little daughter, aged 11, has been examined by a physician who is considered a specialist in kidney disease. He said he could find nothing wrong with her kidneys and advised me to feed her the ordinary diet—as much sweets, meat, etc.—as a child of 11 should have. Also to give her cod liver oil. Night sweats have again put in an appearance since she has been having a small amount of sweets. Five years ago her urine was high in sugar and continued that way for six months or more, but we have succeeded in controlling it by diet. She is still underweight.

Is there such a thing as a cure and is it possible she should be allowed the things a normal child eats? Please answer this.
"MRS. H."

I am sorry you were disappointed, Mrs. H., but in every mail I have hundreds of questions, and for lack of space and time it is impossible for me to answer them all. Some questions I can't answer because they cannot be considered in a newspaper, and others because they ask for diagnosis and treatment which can only be given by a physician who has examined the patient. But the questions I do take up have to be answered in turn, and if I have recently written on the subject it has to be omitted for awhile. I had recently written on saccharin.

If you are a follower of the column you will notice I write mostly on the prevention of disease. (That is the reason I pay so much attention to overweight.) It is the province of a personal physician to tell one how to treat disease.

I'll talk about your little girl first. You should have told your doctor (and I'll say, too, he should have gotten a complete history) that your little girl had diabetes and he would have known she could probably not manage the diet of the normal child. You should take her back to him immediately again to have her urine examined again to see if she has had a lighting-up of her case.

While we are not sure that diabetes in child or adult can be cured, the patients can be kept in comparatively good health with the use of insulin and the right diet, and if the case is very moderate, by the diet alone.

Now about the saccharin. All of the diabetic specialists who works I have studied do allow a small amount of saccharin, a sweetening agent. Allen allows up to two grains a day, but a child probably wouldn't be allowed so much. A quarter-grain of saccharin will sweeten eight ounces of liquid as much as a teaspoon of sugar. It is just as well for these diabetics (and overweighters) to learn to like their beverages unsweetened. Saccharin is a coal tar product and if taken in over very small amounts it may be harmful.

I wish I might help you more.

CRITICISM OF FAMILY HURTS FEELINGS OF MISS FOURTEEN

Fourteen year olds are sensitive. They are conscious of being half grown, of unmanageable arms and legs and of always saying and doing the wrong thing. Plenty of brothers and sisters are delightful at times, but when one is fourteen is not one of them. You are "too old," according to them, to do anything childish if you want to, but "just a child" if you want to appear grownup. One of these unfortunate writes me as follows:

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I have been reading your letters in the paper and I have enjoyed them very much. I have a serious problem for you to help me solve. I am 14 years old. I have two sisters and four brothers. My youngest sister is 17.

"It seems as if none of them care anything about me except father. I am as good to them as I can be. They fuss with me and don't ever want me to go anywhere. Don't you think I am old enough to go off with a crowd of boys and girls my age once in a while? I am in the eighth grade. I had my hair cut like a boy's and I am letting it grow out. Every time I say anything about it they laugh at me. They seem like they don't want me to go decent. Do you think that I just feel like it or they really do it? Now, Mrs. Lee please answer this letter for me because I think of the way they treat me and cry. This is a mighty long letter, but I thought you could help me with all my troubles. Love, "TROUBLED."

Bless your heart, dear, most young people your age have their trying moments, and families never seem to appreciate one. Stick to your father. Maybe he remembers when he was your age and how everyone seemed down on him. I think it is mostly seeming that they fuss at you, so, however, you are sensitive. Yes, I think you are old enough to go out occasionally with boys and girls of your own age. Ask your sisters if they didn't do it when they were your age. I'll bet they did. Try not to mind when they tease you and continue to treat them right. You'll soon be older, and if you keep sweet and jolly they'll all be proud of you. One's family always teases, but it is nice to have brothers and sisters just the same.

Cormorant Asks Mercy of Gitter-Eyes

"Cormorant was so near his own home—in the distance he could see sticking up out of the channel water his old familiar spar buoy—that he did not feel at all lonely when the last gull flew off. He was too busy thinking about the welcome he would receive, how the folks eyes would pop out when he told them all that he had seen and heard!"

"What a wonderful bird they would think him—how his family would boast about him to his uncles and his aunts and his cousins! He could scarcely wait until he reached the nest. But wait, a minute, he was thinking too fast! He had forgotten for how long he had been away. In two months' play of things could happen. His little brothers and sisters would be almost grown up by now! What if something had gone wrong with one of them! Perhaps there was no longer any nest!"

"Cormorant's joy turned to anxiety and he quickened his pace. His heart missed a beat or two as he thought of all the dreadful things that might have occurred to his dear ones while he had been away. In his excitement Cormorant got a little bit out of his course, flying much lower than he generally did and over the low marshy banks of the channel.

Then Cormorant fell to dreaming. Never would he have left the clear blue water if he had known what he was doing. He loved to see his image reflected in the clear mirror as, with wings outspread he skimmed lightly over it. He was brought to his senses with a start.

"Look where you are going! Can't you see a hoarse voice in a hoarse whisper. 'Another moment and you would have tumbled right off this limb.'"

A snakey head rose up in front of Cormorant and the startled bird found himself looking into two glittering eyes that had anything but a pleasant expression as they gazed at him.

"Help! Help! A snake! A snake!" GASPED CORMORANT.

"Help! Help! A snake, gasped Cormorant in a weak voice, too frightened to do anything but feebly flutter his wings. 'I am lost unless you stop glaring at me like that, Gitter-Eyes! I can't move. You have paralyzed me!'

Moreover, there is grave fear that of all girls obliged to enter employment, these too dull-witted to be good operators will enter a more rapidly than the bright ones. The ratio of really smart folks to those not so smart is never any too high.

Crab's Emotions Shown

That crabs have some emotions and not others was demonstrated by scientists in London recently. It was shown that a crab fettered by one claw and left with food just out of reach will starve to death, but the placing of a polyp, the crab's deadly enemy, near it, will cause the prisoner to become convulsed with fear. The shock caused the tied claw to come off so that the crustacean can scuttle away to safety.

Street To Be Ball Room

Entertaining guests together and using the street as the ball room is the plan being worked out by residents of one side of North Street, London. Under the shadow of Westminster the neighbors of the small and ancient street have become well acquainted, and as their homes are too small for entertaining on a large scale, they propose to cover the pavement with a awning and throw open their respective houses, which will be used as places for sitting out. Dinner will be served in each house so that guests will have the choice of at least a dozen meals.

ANOTHER CLOUD WITH A SILVER LINING

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Anthropological campaign anthropological.

Well, it was like this—Some anthropologists do not agree with Dr. Hrdlicka. They maintain that the human race does not progress mentally. That is to say, of course the cavemen did not know a great many things that are a-b-c to us now. He knew nothing about electricity in all its manifestations, or steam, or the atomic theory, or automobiles or any of the rest of our up-to-date improvements.

From all of which, however, we should no more conclude—if this hypothesis is sound—that the cavemen was mentally inferior to the man of today than we should conclude that the American of 1900 was mentally inferior to the 1928 American simply because the former knew nothing about airplanes.

Turning the theory the other way around—Except for a few superficial mechanical conveniences, we are still cavemen and are liable, any minute, to act like it.

It is a theory which has a certain amount of plausibility. It seemed to me that it might account for a presidential campaign which raises a lot of issues such as history informs us that the benighted folk of many generations waxed furious over—but issues which I had imagined were dead and buried as the dodo-bird, to the 20th century.

So, inasmuch as Dr. Hrdlicka knows more about the human race than any other man living, I took my problem to Dr. Hrdlicka.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

DEVELOPING BEAUTY FROM INFANCY

I think that as every mother dreams of greatness for her son, she dreams of beauty for her daughter. The strange part is that while most mothers realize that it is within their own power to make what they will of the minds and the characters of their children, they frequently forget that the development of physical loveliness lies well within their own hands. I am going to try and explain many easily forgotten methods I know of, in which a mother can develop loveliness in her child, not only so that it lasts through youth, but remains as an eternal blessing through the years.

From the earliest days of infancy, we have certain fundamental subjects of care which may be attended to in such a way as to provide comfort for the present, and beauty for the future. When a little baby comes into the world, it is not very beautiful. It has a skin as soft as rose petals, and endless possibilities. It is these possibilities which we must not neglect.

The first thing that your doctor or nurse will tell you when your baby is placed in your arms is the proper way to hold the child. It is strange that while we realize how carefully the little head must be protected and the neck and spine supported, we forget that the beauty of an erect carriage can be developed in the child from birth, through care and common sense in your methods of holding the baby.

You know, of course, that one hand must always be placed at the shoulder blades, supporting the head and neck of the child. However, while most mothers take care of this and quickly learn the practice the correct way to hold the baby, I have seen innumerable cases where all the good effects of proper holding have been nullified by laying baby down in his or her crib with the head thrust out of place by the use of a pillow. In carriages and cribs, pillows are wholly superfluous, and I might even say, detrimental to the health and good looks of your child. Try undressing the baby absolutely flat.

If, in early days, as not infrequently happens, the baby shows a desire to sleep on its stomach, do not discourage it, but take care that there are no hills or valleys in the mattresses to throw the spine out of alignment.

As both a health and a beauty measure for your baby, be sure that there is never any constriction of the little legs or arms through tight and binding clothing. As a general rule, the less you can put on your baby the better it is. By that I do not mean that you are to select clothes in-

Household Hints

By MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT

Breaded Veal Steak, Cream Sauce
Mashed Potatoes Fried Eggplant
Sliced Tomatoes, French Dressing

Cornstarch Pudding Coffee
For the cream gravy proceed as follows: After meat is done remove from pan, add flour, mix well and when brown, add milk to make gravy. Cook until thick and smooth. The steak is more easily served when it is cut in pieces the size of each serving.

TODAY'S RECIPE

Cornstarch Pudding—Heat two cups of milk in a double boiler. Add one-third cup sugar or one-quarter cup strained honey, and stir in six tablespoons cornstarch. Cook until smooth. Pour into a bowl to chill, and fold in one cup whipped cream flavored with vanilla. Serve with fresh or canned fruits or berries.

SUGGESTIONS

New Way With Old Pudding
A new way to serve the old, familiar cornstarch pudding is as follows: Scald one quart of milk and add a beaten egg and the following dry ingredients: three tablespoons sugar, pinch of salt. Cook until thick, add teaspoon vanilla and cook. Then pour into sherbet glasses lined with lady fingers and top with a spoonful of your favorite jam.

Hat Stands Amusing
The new hat stands are amusing as well as useful. One is a big, white bunny, sitting up holding a cabbage leaf in his front paws while he nibbles it, presumably his upstanding ears making the hat rest. Then there is a big black cat with arched back and tail with a pointed witch's cap on her back, whereon a hat may well be placed. A row of such on the closet shelf makes an interesting study while selecting the hat for the outing planned.

The Way to Wash Gloves
The proper way to wash gloves is on the hands. After washing rinse in two cool rinses, using a teaspoon of soap beads in each rinse water. Wipe dry with a Turkish towel—blow into the gloves to restore their shape and finish drying process away from the heat.

Creole Sauce

(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe)
Mix one quart sliced white onions and twelve finely-chopped green peppers. Simmer until soft, add about twice the bulk of tomatoes and cook together over a low fire until tender. Season to taste. Pack into clean, hot jars, and seal immediately.

sufficiently warm. This is a dreadful mistake, of course. However, it is not necessary to bind the child in the swaddling clothes which I truly believe are much to blame for many cases of ill health and improper development. It has been frequently advanced as a theory that the small stature and fragile bones of the Latin peoples have been developed through generations of "swaddling." In many instances, among the peasantry of Italy, babies are actually sewed into their clothes. Quite aside from the question of sanitation, it is a harmful practice which stunts the growth of the child.

Insure your baby's health and happiness by firm and loose clothing.

DIABETICS OVERWEIGHTERS BEST LEARN TO OMIT SWEETS

The Use of Saccharin.
"I wrote sometime ago and I consider my question of sufficient interest to find an answer in the paper, but so far you have not answered. I asked if the best authorities on the treatment of diabetes approve of the use of saccharin and if they recommend it."

Since writing you last, my little daughter, aged 11, has been examined by a physician who is considered a specialist in kidney disease. He said he could find nothing wrong with her kidneys and advised me to feed her the ordinary diet—as much sweets, meat, etc., as a child of 11 should have. Also to give her cod liver oil. Night sweats have again put in an appearance since she has been having a small amount of sweets. Five years ago her urine was high in sugar and continued that way for six months or more, but we have succeeded in controlling it by diet. She is still underweight. Is there such a thing as a cure and is it possible she should be allowed the things a normal child eats? Please answer this. "MRS. H."

I am sorry you were disappointed, Mrs. H., but in every mail I have hundreds of questions, and for lack of space and time it is impossible for me to answer them all. Some questions I can't answer because they cannot be considered in a newspaper, and others because they ask for diagnosis and treatment which can only be given by a physician who has examined the patient. But the questions I do take up have to be answered in turn, and if I have recently written on the subject it has to be omitted for awhile. I had recently written on saccharin.

If you are a follower of the column you will notice I write mostly on the prevention of disease. (That is the reason I pay so much attention to overweight.) It is the province of a personal physician to tell one how to treat disease.

I'll talk about your little girl first. You should have told your doctor and I'll say, too, he should have gotten a complete history) that your little girl had diabetes and he would have known she could probably not manage the diet of the normal child. You should take her back to him immediately and have her urine examined again to see if she has had a lightening up of her case.

While we are not sure that diabetes in child or adult can be cured, the patients can be kept in comparatively good health with the use of insulin and the right diet, and if the case is very moderate, by the diet alone.

Now about the saccharin. All of the diabetic specialists who work with I have studied do allow a small amount of saccharin, a sweetening agent. Allen allows up to two grains a day, but a child probably wouldn't be allowed so much. A quarter-grain of saccharin will sweeten eight ounces of liquid as much as a teaspoon of sugar. It is just as well for these diabetics (and overweighters) to learn to like their beverages unsweetened. Saccharin is a coal tar product and if taken in over very small amounts it may be harmful.

I wish I might help you more.

Mental Disturbances.

CRITICISM OF FAMILY HURTS FEELINGS OF MISS FOURTEEN

Fourteen year olds are sensitive. They are conscious of being half grown, of unmanageable arms and legs and of always saying and doing the wrong thing. Plenty of Brothers and sisters are delightful at times, but when one is fourteen is not one of them. You are "too old," according to them, to do anything childish you want to do, but "just a child" if you want to appear grownup. One of these unfortunate writes me as follows:

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I have been reading your letters in the paper and I have enjoyed them very much. I have a serious problem for you to help me solve. I am 14 years old. I have two sisters and four brothers. My youngest sister is 17.

"It seems as if none of them care anything about me except father. I am as good to them as I can be. They fuss with me and don't ever want me to go anywhere. Don't you think I am old enough to go off with a crowd of boys and girls my age once in a while? I am in the eighth grade. I had my hair cut like a boy's and I am letting it grow out. Every time I say anything about it they laugh at me. They seem like they don't want me to go decent. Do you think that I just feel like it or they really do it? Now, Mrs. Lee please answer this letter for me because I think of the way they treat me and cry. This is a mighty long letter, but I thought you could help me with all my troubles. Love,

"TROUBLED."

Bless your heart, dear, most young people your age have their trying moments, and families never seem to appreciate one. Stick to your father. Maybe he remembers when he was your age and how everyone seemed down on him. I think it is mostly seeming that they fuss at you so, however. You are sensitive. Yes, I think you are old enough to go out occasionally with boys and girls of your own age. Ask your sisters if they didn't do it when they were your age. I'll bet they did. Try not to mind when they tease you and continue to treat them right. You'll soon be older, and if you keep sweet and jolly they'll all be proud of you. One's family and its ways teases, but it is nice to have brothers and sisters just the same.

Cormorant Asks Mercy of Gitter-Eyes

"Cormorant was so near his own home—in the distance he could see sticking up out of the channel water his old familiar spar buoy—that he did not feel at all lonely when the last gull flew off. He was too busy thinking about the welcome he would receive, how the folks' eyes would pop up when he told them all that he had seen and heard!"

"What a wonderful bird he would think him—how his family would boast about him to his uncles and his aunts and his cousins! He could scarcely wait until he reached the nest. But wait, a minute, he was thinking too fast! He had forgotten for how long he had been away. In two months plenty of things could happen. His little brothers and sisters would be almost grown up by now! What if something had gone wrong with one of them! Perhaps there was no longer any nest!"

"Cormorant's joy turned to anxiety and he quickened his heart. His heart missed a beat or two as he thought of all the dreadful things that might have occurred to his dear ones while he had been away. In his excitement Cormorant got a little bit out of his course, flying much lower than he generally did and over the low marshy banks of the channel.

"Then Cormorant fell to dreaming. Never would he have left the clear blue water if he had known what he was doing. He loved to see his image reflected in the clear mirror as, with wings outspread he skimmed lightly over it. He was brought to his senses with a start.

"HELP! HELP! A SNAKE! GASPED CORMORANT"

"Help! Help! A snake," gasped Cormorant in a weak voice, too frightened to do anything but feebly flutter his wings. "I am lost unless you stop glaring at me like that, Gitter-Eyes! I can't move. You have paralyzed me!"

PUNTS AND PASSES

Xenia fans have their second opportunity this week to prophesy the outcome of twenty of the most important college football games in Ohio and various parts of the country, scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 13.

As has been hinted once before, the task of picking winners will get more and more difficult week by week and Saturday is no exception since early season indications point to a campaign of upsets.

This week George P. Henkel, 215 N. West St., well known football fan has courageously assumed the role of football forecaster, but will have to pick the winners in seven out of the twenty games to maintain the high average of .446 established by a local fan's selections last week when the results of eleven out of thirteen contests were correctly predicted.

Henkel's selections follow:
Case to beat Mount Union.
Ohio Wesleyan to beat Cincinnati.
Kenyon to beat Otterbein.
Wittenberg to beat Oberlin.
Ohio Northern to beat Heidelberg.
Brown to beat Dayton.
Iowa to beat Chicago.
Colgate to beat Virginia Poly.
Columbia to beat Wesleyan.
Harvard to beat North Carolina.
Michigan to beat Indiana.
Minnesota to beat Purdue.
New York U. to beat Durham.
Ohio State to beat Northwestern.
Notre Dame to beat Navy.
State to beat Bucknell.
Pittsburgh to beat West Virginia.
Georgia Tech to beat Tulane.
Yale to beat Georgia.

DEFERS SENTENCE AFTER GUILTY PLEA

At the conclusion of the state's testimony in the jury trial of Hiram Dixon, under indictment for auto theft, which was begun in Common Pleas Court Thursday morning, the defendant, through his counsel, withdrew his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty, whereupon Judge R. L. Gowdy deferred sentence for the present.

Dixon is accused of being implicated in the alleged theft of a Studebaker touring car, 1924 model, valued at $350, from Ernest H. Schmidt, Xenia grocer, August 13, 1928.

BOXWELL INJURED IN GRID PRACTICE

Hurt in severe scrimmage practice to which the squad was subjected this week by Coach "Shifty" Bolen, Paul Boxwell, this city, backfield star on the Wilmington College football team, is reported to be on the shelf with two broken ribs.

Bolen put members of the squad through such stiff workouts following the humiliating 23 to 0 defeat by Dayton last week, that five members of the first team have been injured and will probably not play against Ashland Saturday.

Because Wilmington lost by twenty-eight points to Dayton, Coach Bolen has required each player to circle the goal posts twenty-eight times every evening.

WILL ABANDON S. & X. SERVICE

After watching the Lang eleven lose two straight games by close scores, followers of the team were cheered by the announcement that Atlas Smith, 200-pound fullback, will play in the lineup Sunday.

The husky player worked out with the squad Wednesday and his line punting should be a big help against the Tigers.

It practice makes perfect, as the saying goes, the Langs should be physically fit for the contest. Another practice session will be held at the park Friday.

Washington C. H. will bring to Xenia a strong semi-pro aggregation. The Tigers have defeated Cleveland and Logan this season while losing to the Ironton Tanks and Portsmouth, two of the leading independent teams in the state.

HOOVER FAVORED BY STUDENTS IN STRAW VOTE AT ANTIOCH

Herbert Hoover, Republican nominee for president, received more than a two to one plurality over the Democratic opponent, Governor Alfred E. Smith, in a straw vote taken Wednesday as a climax of political activities of students of Division "A" at Antioch College.

Hoover obtained a plurality of fifty-one votes over Smith and Thomas. In the student count, the Republican candidate received 122 votes, while Smith had fifty-three and Thomas eighteen.

The college faculty vote was about evenly divided, fifteen professors favoring Hoover, ten for Smith and seven for Thomas.

The straw vote followed a series of talks on the three presidential candidates by faculty members during the college assembly periods.

The vote was taken on ballots specially prepared by Dr. Horace B. English, professor of psychology at the college and will probably be sent out by the Ohio Republican committee for use in other colleges and universities.

Questions of a psychological nature were also answered on the ballot, indicating what factors influenced the student in choosing his candidate.

MOORE TRIAL WILL BE HELD OCTOBER 25 PROSECUTOR SAYS

Originally set for last August 17 and then postponed indefinitely, the second jury trial of Nellie Moore, 23, on a charge of possessing liquor, will be held in Common Pleas Court October 23, Prosecuting Attorney J. Carl Marshall announced Thursday.

Last May the Ohio Supreme Court reversed the action of the Greene County Common Pleas Court and Court of Appeals, which had upheld the judgment of Probate Court in her conviction and time of $1,000 and costs.

It was charged in the appeal that Probate Court erred in rejecting the defendant's motion that the case be transferred to some other court because of alleged prejudice of Probate Court. She claimed she could not get a fair trial in Probate Court.

After Probate Judge S. C. Wright heard evidence in support of an affidavit of prejudice and decided not to rehear the case on its merits, a new affidavit charging Nellie Moore with possessing liquor was filed in Common Pleas Court by Prosecutor Marshall.

HELPED DURING MIDDLE AGE

Woman Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Denver, Colo.—"I have taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and will take more. I am taking it as a tonic to help me through the Change of Life and I am telling many of my friends to take it as I found nothing before this to help me. I had so many bad feelings at night for two years I could not sleep and for two years I was afraid of falling. My mother took the Vegetable Compound years ago with good results and now I am taking it during the Change of Life and recommending it."—Mrs. T. A. MILLER, 1611 Adams Street, Denver, Colorado.

BOY INJURED WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO

William Borton, 12, Spring St., received severe injuries about the head, when he was struck by the auto, driven by Zack Reynolds, Chestnut St., near the Spring Hill School, Thursday morning at 8:30 p'clock.

The boy was enroute to the school on roller skates and crossed the street directly in the path of the auto, it is said. Reynolds was exonerated from blame for the accident, by witnesses.

The boy was removed to his home and was attended by two physicians, who reported his injuries not serious. No bones were broken and cuts and abrasions were the worst of his hurts.

Do you KNOW the Number?

WHEN you make an out-of-town telephone call, the long-distance operator asks you that question.

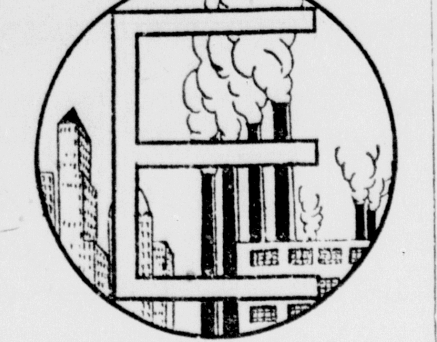

Her reason is that if you furnish the number usually she can call the distant point immediately and have the connection made while you hold the line. In most cases, you are talking to the distant party in a minute or so.

If you do not know the number of the out-of-town telephone, call the Information operator. She will be glad to furnish it.

EFFICIENCY

It Enables Hoover To Accomplish Wonders

When Hoover was in his early twenties, his employers discovered that if they sent him to a mine to make the enterprise profitable, and at the same time that he was increasing dividends for the stockholders, he was improving living conditions for the workers. Hoover never wastes a minute. In Washington, prior to his nomination, he was doing the work of a dozen experts. He decides instantly and acts promptly. To his great humanitarian undertakings he has brought not only the customary amount of sentiment and an unusual capacity for self-sacrifice, but something far rarer in humanitarian work, the clear, cool head of the business man and the engineer. After Hoover took hold of the Mississippi flood relief, scarcely a life was lost.

POLITICAL SERMONS
How grand it would be if we could go to church and hear the good old fashioned sermons. Political speeches are all right and we are sure to hear many of them. But why should we have to sit through the sermon hour on Sunday and listen to the upholding of prohibition. How any one can claim that prohibition has helped our country is more than I can understand. I am a Protestant and greatly admire Al Smith and I pray he will be made president. But I would be glad also if the sermon hour on Sunday was devoted to something more related to scripture. The plain people are far more numerous than the high colored crowd. Thank God for the common people who believe in liberty. "Give me liberty or give me death," said Patrick Henry. "By their fruits ye shall know them," sayeth the scriptures. Alfred E. Smith has shown his faith by his works and he is a great and fearless American.

RATE FIGHT IN COURT
Although reduced freight rates on fertilizer became effective on October 1, the four-year fight of farmers of this section of the country to secure them has gone to the courts. This is the word received this week by the Greene County Farm Bureau from headquarters of the Ohio Farm Bureau which brought the original complaint which resulted in the rate reduction.

Railroads are now attempting to get an injunction against the lower freight rates on fertilizer which were recently ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Hearing on their request will be held in the United States District Court in Chicago before the end of October.

Fresh Vegetables By the Bottle!

THERE are valuable dietary qualities in vegetables, but not all of us get enough fresh vegetables, and no soon tires of a "vegetable diet." A simple way to remedy this is to get a little syrup pepsin. Take a spoonful occasionally and you stimulate the inner system. Your keener appetite, and perfect assimilation of whatever you eat will soon show you are on the right track! Your elimination will become more thorough and regular.

So, don't give up things you like to eat, or eat a lot of other things because you "ought to." The syrup pepsin can establish that perfect balance without dieting. And how pure syrup pepsin tones the stomach, liver and bowels! You'll soon discover you can eat anything. Your chronic, recurring constipation spells will disappear. A perfect diet.

Try this wonderful vegetable product. Dr. Caldwell first used it in 1875. Today, you cannot name a druggist who hasn't this famous prescription always on hand, all put up, directions enclosed. Nothing is so wonderful for children, too; it is an ideal combination of laxative herbs and pure pepsin that just about insures the health of young or old.

The rate reduction amounts to approximately a dollar a ton on all fertilizer moving in Ohio. It was ordered by the Commission after a long period of hearings started by the Ohio Farm Bureau and later joined by fertilizer manufacturers. The lower rates went into effect on a temporary basis on October 5, and were ordered permanently to start December 5.

YOUTH'S WIT SAVES TRAGEDY

Paul Combs, Hitch-Hiker, Prevents Accidents As Autoist Suffers "Spell."

Presence of mind of Paul Combs, 316 W. Church St., "hitch-hiking" from Dayton to Xenia with an unidentified Zimmerman autoist late Wednesday afternoon probably averted a tragic accident when the driver became unconscious and lost control of the machine at a point on the Dayton and Xenia Pike near the Greene County line.

Combs had "thumbed" a ride to Xenia from the outskirts of Dayton.

When the driver was suddenly seized by a spell of some kind and slumped down behind the steering wheel, Combs put his foot on the foot brake, partly stopping the momentum of the car, grabbed the steering wheel in the nick of time to prevent running down a child walking along the pike, then steered it out of the path of an approaching auto, barely avoiding a collision.

As the car, still traveling rapidly, headed for the ditch on the other side of the road, Combs leaped out tearing his clothes, and the machine crashed into a pole.

The driver was unhurt and recovered consciousness, noting the worse for his experience.

M. L. Wolf, 8 King St., Xenia, who had been trailing the car toward Xenia, stopped at the scene of the accident picked up the frightened boy at his request and brought him to Xenia.

The name of the driver was not learned but it is believed he is a resident of Zimmerman and in the transfer business.

MAN WHO ATTACKED OFFICER IS SLAIN

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 11.—Charles Bednar, 28, an ex-service man, was shot and killed here last night after a hand to hand struggle with Patrolman Michael Wallace, who said Bednar leaped upon him in the dark.

Bednar's brother, Joseph, told officers today that he had been ill, mentally, and this was believed to have inspired his attack on Wallace.

Wallace said he struggled with Bednar for fifteen minutes and finally forced him into a gutter from which the man fled. Wallace pursued him, he said, and finally emptied his service revolver at him.

Bednar was shot two times.

Touches that Add Style to Dresses

By MAE MARTIN

You get so you just despise a dress when everywhere you go it seems to shout, "I am a last year's relic." A few touches have brought many dresses like that back into style. It's amazing to see how easily they can be transformed by a few buttons, a little braid and the quick magic of home tinting or dyeing.

You don't need any experience to do home tinting or dyeing successfully if you are sure to use only true, fadeless Diamond Dyes. Each package represents the perfection of over fifty years of dye-making. Tinting with them is easy as bluing, and dyeing just takes a little more time. New colors appear like magic, right over the old colors.

Diamond Dyes give the daintiest of the latest tints and the richest of the new shades, with never a trace of that undesirable red-look which comes from inferior dyes. Insist on Diamond Dyes and save disappointment.

My new 64 page book, "Color Craft," gives hundreds of dollar-saving suggestions for renewing clothes, draperies and rugs. It's fully illustrated in colors. Write for your FREE copy, NOW. Address Mae Martin, Home Service Dept., Diamond Dyes, Burlington, Vermont.

In 5 MILLION HOMES TONIGHT

A cry in the night holds no terror for the household where there's Castoria! A few drops, and Baby's sudden ailment is relieved. Your little one is comforted, and you have done only what any nurse or any doctor would have told you to do. For Castoria is a vegetable product; made for babies, and the one safe means of quieting any infant. It is not a narcotic, it contains no opiate, yet it always comforts a child.

Don't let night come without a bottle of Castoria on hand; it's a mighty comfortable feeling to know it's in the house. And it is an ever-ready aid when any of the children are constipated, have colic, develop a case of diarrhea. Old and tried, but the standby of modern mothers. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

representatives of an American newspaper syndicate; Walter Kleff, Theo Matekoff, artist; Rolf Brand, painter; Prof. Ludwig Dettman; Robert Hartman, a cameraman; Herr Boek of the Telefunken Wireless Company; Herr Schirz of the Zeiss optical works; Colonel Herrera of Spain; Herr Von Tyska, an insurance director; Herr Haym, a photographer; and one representative of the Reichstag.

The crew includes: Captain E. E. Ecker, commander; Dr. Hugo Eckener, first officer; H. C. Flemming, second in command; H. von Schiller, Anton Wittenmann, Max Pross, Walter Scherz, navigators; Wilhelm Seigle, chief engineer; Wilhelm Seigle, assistant engineer; Walter Dunke, Willy Speck, Hands Ludwig, wireless operators; A. Samt Knut Ecker, K. Schoenherr, K. Norr, P. H. Lenz, riggers; August Grozing, Hermann Pfaff, chief machinists. There are also fifteen machinists and two stewards.

As an indication of the increased confidence in aviation it was announced that the Ad Valorem charge for insurance for the Graf Zeppelin on this trip was only 9 per cent whereas the charge for the Los Angeles was 15 per cent in 1924.

The main saloon of the ship is furnished with card tables and cozy nooks where the passengers can congregate. The dining saloon is tastefully furnished—one general color scheme being observed throughout and each table is arranged close to the half open window.

There is a small kitchen, operated by electricity, for preparing meals, and advance announcements indicated the choicest dishes would be prepared for the passengers, who gave $3,000 each for the flight.

Liquor may be purchased aboard the craft at the same price as that charged by trans-Atlantic liners.

The Graf Zeppelin also carried a great supply of mail and parcels for delivery in the United States. It was announced that 62,000 letters and post cards had been received for the flight.

Tentative plans today called for the Graf Zeppelin to make an extended tour of the United States before returning to Germany. The return flight, Eckener believes, will be made in considerably less time than the one on which he started today.

LAKELAND, N. J., Oct. 11.—Officers of the naval air station here put the final touch today to preparations for the arrival of the German dirigible Graf Zeppelin.

Men from the New York navy yards have been brought in to augment the ground crew, but no greater difficulty is expected in handling the huge European ship than the Los Angeles.

The Los Angeles was safely in its hangar here today after what was described as a "highly successful" trip to and from San Antonio, Tex.

The Los Angeles arrived at Lakeland last night, completing the return in forty-eight hours.

The Little Yellow House

By BEATRICE BURTON -- RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. © 1928

The little yellow house never showed its true dinginess because Mrs. Milburn refused to let anyone see it. Her love transformed it to a shining palace where sacrificing devotion made everything out of nothing. Emmy, the only daughter, wanted to lift herself from the ordinariness of the little street she lived in, to the heights where she felt she properly belonged. After a party given by her rich cousin, Marianna, she resolved to better herself some day. Meantime she took a business course, paid for by Grandmother. Pentland, and snubbed, as well as she could, Robb, the boy down the street, who worked in a mill, and who represented the life she determined never to sink into. One day Emmy met once more the man who looked like Robb. She remembered the first meeting at the ice skating rink. He had taken her home. Her mother had said, "Never make yourself even a little cheap and common, Emmy."

Emmy learns that the man is going with her cousin, Marianna.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XXI

Christmas week always seemed very Christmasy in the little yellow house.

For days Mrs. Milburn had been buying holly in the open market down town and twisting it into wreaths for doors and windows. She had made anise drops and ginger snaps that stood in a tall brown crock in the ice pantry, sending a most tantalizing odor into the cold air.

For months she had been making Christmas presents; towels and pin-cushions and men's handkerchiefs. She had tied them all up with tissue paper and with red ribbons carefully saved from the Christmas presents she herself had received last year. Mrs. Milburn never threw away a single thing that she thought she might possibly find a use for. "Wifely waste makes woe," she would quote when Emmy threw away pieces of string or bits of soap.

A fragrance of fir tree and baking mince pies—the very smell of Christmas—was in the air. When she stepped into the hall of the house.

She went straight through the dining room to the kitchen, from behind whose closed door came the murmur of voices and the tap-tap of a chopping knife in a wooden bowl. Holding her dripping umbrella in one hand and her rubber in the other, she called out:

"Please open the door, somebody!"

It was flung open, and there against the steam and brightness of the old kitchen stood Robb Hollis.

"Here she is!" He half turned his head toward Mrs. Milburn who sat in the red rocker with the choppings bowl in her lap. When Robb said "she," in that husky voice he meant Emmy.

"Here I am, soaked to the skin," said Emmy. Her eyes deepened and glowed as she looked up at him. Ah, it was good to see him again! To hear the sound of his deep voice. To put her hand in his for just a second. Robb. Nobody like him anywhere, after all.

"Robb's had a Christmas present already," Mrs. Milburn spoke from her little low chair. "He's been given the job as assistant superintendent down here at the mill. Isn't that fine?"

Emmy did not know what it meant to be the superintendent of a woolen mill as large as Mr. Teich's and so she did not realize how extraordinary it was for Robb, at twenty-five, to step into such a position.

"Fine, Robb," she said, setting her dripping umbrella in one corner of the sink. "How much money will you make now?"

He laughed, his eyes crinkling up at the corners. "More than I'm making now, little. The point is that it's almost what you might call a white-collar job. I promised you I'd get one, you know. But I didn't know how soon it would be."

She nodded, remembering the night above the lake at Gordon Park when she had told him he looked like a day laborer in his old blue shirt.

"Only I'll probably still go on wearing the old blue collar," he said cheerfully. "I like them for work. I suppose I'm just naturally a low-brow."

He followed her a minute later when she went into the shadowy sitting room to shake out her drenched hat before the fire that crackled in the grate.

"How about it, Emmy?" he said awkwardly. "Does it make any difference to you—my getting this new job? Or do you still feel about me the way you did that night when you called me a day laborer?"

There was not a trace of bitterness, of resentment, in his voice. And when Emmy looked up at him she saw that his eyes were fixed on her with that deep steadfast look he always had for her.

It was balm to her wounded feelings to know that he still cared for her in this humble and adoring way. And how much more of a man he was than Jim Baldwin and his kind!

"I didn't call you a day laborer," Robb said. "I only told you you were dressed like one that night. And you know how I feel about you—Robb, I've missed you so!"

He answered, with his young hard arms tight around her and his lips moving against her hair that he always said smelled like honey and hot sunshine.

"I'll be making two hundred a month pretty soon now, Emmy. We could get a little home together with it, and a new car after a while. Instead of the struggle-buggy, Emmy, if you've missed me the way you say you have, don't you think you care for me? I want to live with the woman I love!"

He kissed her and all his longing for her was in his kiss.

"I do love him," Emmy thought. "There's no doubt about it. He ran a deeper one. 'He doesn't see life as I see it, though. He thinks two hundred a month is all there is to wish for, and it isn't! I want so many things—'"

And as far as the two hundred went, she'd be earning almost as much as that herself within a year or so, it was nothing but a good stenographer's secretary to draw a salary of a hundred and fifty a month, so Mr. Larch of the business college had told her only that afternoon.

She could picture life with Robb on two hundred a month. A little house or a little flat not too far away from the mill. Installment plan furniture. An alarm clock shrieking every morning at half-past six. Coffee. A luncheon to pack. A five-thirty whistle at night. Robb coming home to supper. Movies, perhaps. Perhaps a drive in a small cheap car.

"I'd rather not think of getting married for a while, Robb," she said quietly, stirring in his arms. "I just finished this business. I'm not ready to work for a course, and I'd like to work for the best friends in the world and let it go at that? For a few months?"

She drew herself out of the ring that his arms made around her and walked over to the bay window. The rain had stopped and the stars were coming out like little white eager flowers in the dark garden of the sky.

"You ought to marry," Robb's voice came close behind her. "I know you're far above me as those stars out there—"

"Why?" Emmy broke in, turning to him. "You mean because of the family—the Pentlands? Oh, Robb, you know it does make a difference if you come from people like them—people who've been used to money, people who are somebody! It can't help but make a difference."

Robb gave a short laugh. It never made any difference to him whether people were rich or poor, Pentlands or McMillers. He either liked them or did not like them, not for what they had but for what they were.

"Your mother comes from the Pentlands," he said with a certain grimness, "and she doesn't think she's above the rest of the neighborhood. She is, of course, but she doesn't know it."

"Who's talking about me in here?" It was Mrs. Milburn's voice from the shadows of the hall

The Theater

The day of the sugar-sweet, be-curl'd, impossibly perfect heroine appears to have ended on the American screen. The character has been on the downpath for a number of years until now it seems to have joined the dodo, the completely villainous villain and the faultless straight-shooting western hero.

Even Mary Pickford, who created such a heroine and who won her fame as such, has abandoned the role.

Just how far Miss Pickford has gone with this change will not be known until her next picture is released but it is certain she will play the type of girl who has at least a few faults to overcome.

How far the sweet young thing has faded is shown in a survey of a few Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer winter releases.

In "Four Walls" Joan Crawford plays the role of a heroine who can't remain true to the man she loves when he is sent to prison. The presentation of such a leading lady a few years ago would have been considered treason to the motion picture industry.

It is beside the point but interesting that Miss Crawford spends all her spare moments with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., to whom she is engaged.

Norma Shearer appears as the feminine crook who marries a man the better to fleece him in "The Little Angel" and Greta Garbo entices men to ruin in her characterization of a spy in "The Mysterious Lady."

Hollywood generally credits Miss Garbo and Pola Negri with convincing the producers that heroines can be slightly soiled without being uninteresting.

One of Hollywood's most consistent rumors says John Gilbert and Greta Garbo are in the throes of a real romance.

On the strength of the love scenes they offer on the screen the report must be given credence. "Garbo and Gilbert" is a Hollywood metaphor for burning love episodes.

It isn't generally known but Gilbert long has entertained a desire to direct rather than act in motion pictures.

He also entertains the hunch that he might become a writer of some note if he had time to devote to the profession.

Until he fades a bit as a screen drawing card he probably will be content to struggle on with the salary his acting gets him.

BRIDGES

Bridges are among the most powerful and picturesque gestures of man. When semi-civilized man learned to bridge the rivers that had stopped the onward marching of his ancestors, he achieved a victory that made him proud.

Every community is proud of its bridges. I remember that, as a child, I shared the pride of the Kansas farming community in which I was reared in the Hydraulic Avenue bridge. It was just a wooden wagon bridge across the Arkansas river. I suppose it was half a mile long, and there was a tradition in the neighborhood that it was the longest wooden wagon bridge in the world. Every little community has these traditions about something that is the greatest in the world.

I have watched, for a year and a half, the rebuilding of a portion of High Bridge, in New York City. Every night and morning, on my way to and from my office in downtown Manhattan, I transfer from one train to another at High Bridge station. I feel a personal proprietorship in High Bridge.

The bridge was built about the time of the Civil War to carry New York's water supply across the Harlem river. It has a narrow roadway, and has not been used for traffic for generations, because there are no streets leading to or from it. It doesn't even figure as a water carrier any longer, as much larger tunnels than the one under the roadway of High Bridge, are now required for the city's water supply.

But the people of New York are so proud of the beautiful old stone arch bridge that, when it was found necessary to take the piers out of the river to make room for increasing water-borne traffic, the public would not stand for destruction of High Bridge. Two million dollars have been spent in removing the piers from the main waterway and substituting a beautiful steel span. Now the bridge is again complete, but useless. The old stone arches on both sides of the river are preserved, and the steel arch over the water doesn't damage the beauty of the old bridge very much.

Every traveler has his favorite bridges. And stay-at-homes are proud of their own bridges and also of the great bridges their countrymen have built elsewhere. Brooklyn Bridge and the bridges near Niagara Falls are more or less the property of all Americans.
